Winter Birding

Sundays, 8:00 – 10:00 a.m. November 20,
January 15, February 19, March 19

Halibut Point State Park, along the Atlantic migratory path, is an excellent locale for winter birding species you rarely see anywhere else. Harlequins, scoters, eiders, grebes, mergansers, loons, gannets and many more spend their winter on our shores. There is also a good possibility of seeing harbor seals that winter here.

Meet Peter Van Demark in the parking lot for this approximately 2 mile stroll along graded paths and the rocky coastline. Learn how to identify some common and uncommon shore, migratory and feeder birds by sight and sound. Children must be accompanied by an adult. Rain or shine. Bring your binoculars!
